The STAND program is a series of research studies conducted by the Innovative Treatment Network (ITN). The ITN is the treatment research component of the UCLA Depression Grand Challenge, a campus-wide research initiative aimed at cutting the burden of depression in half by 2050 and eliminating it by 2100. Learn more about the Innovative Treatment Network and the UCLA Depression Grand Challenge.

Each STAND research study is approved by the UCLA Institutional Review Board (IRB Medical #3). Study procedures are described to participants through an informed consent form. Only individuals who (electronically) sign the appropriate informed consent forms can participate in the STAND program. Below, we provide convenient access to these forms for review.

IRB# 17-001938 – Student Screening
IRB# 16-001395 – Tracking Study
IRB# 16-001395 – Online Therapy with Certified Support
IRB# 17-001365 – Clinical Care

The content of these informed consent forms might change without notice following approval by the UCLA IRB. Participants who have already signed an earlier version of an informed consent form are not affected by these changes. This means that the procedures outlined in the informed consent form signed by a participant will be followed for the given participant. Participants may be offered the opportunity to sign a new informed consent form following these changes but maintain the right to decline signing this new informed consent.